Choosing concealed carry firearm

If I carry my longslide Glock 34 9mm

True

If I carry my subcompact Glock 26 9mm

True

If I carry my new Glock 43 9mm.

false — If I carry my Glock 34 concealed, I will have 18 rounds of 9mm and a fullsize handgun, which I train with on duty all the time but it will be more difficult to conceal and heavier.

false — If I carry my Glock 26, I am limited to 10 rounds and its subcompact, so I dont have a full grip like I would with my Glock 34. It is smaller so easier to conceal but more difficult to fire due to my lack of grip, if I needed it.

false — If I carry my Glock 43, it will conceal easier due to slime frame and size and be more comfortable, but I am limited only to 7 rounds of 9mm. I also struggle to maintain a strong grip due to size of frame.

I can find a holster that accommodate the length and weight to carry it more comfortable and then find a position on my waist where the barrel is not protruding

I can add my plus 2 magazine extension, that will add two more additional rounds but also give the weapon a full size grip. The full size grip will help me maintain the firearm during recoil.

I can also add a plus 2 magazine extension which will give it a fullsize grip and will allow for additional rounds for self defense.

I can leave home and enter the concrete jungle
